Windows 2003 Print Server Review

1. Tyler, the network administrator is going to add a printer to the Windows 2003 server. On a Windows 2003 server, where should Tyler go to add a printer?

2. When adding a local network printer, Michelle, the network administrator can select the create a new port option. What item on the list box will she select to type in the network address?

3. Ryan, the network administrator types the host name or IP address as 192.168.20.200. What is automatically typed in the port name textbox?

4. What can Sarah, the network administrator do to install the network printer driver if the manufacturer and printer is not listed on install the printer driver dialog box?

5. What annotation can the network administrator make on the "Type a printer name" dialogue box after inputting the printer's name?

6. Like fax machines and scanners, printers are a _____ network resource.

7. What is the last step in adding a printer to a network?

8. Where does Stephanie, the network administrator go to enable the Print Spooler on a Windows 2003 server?

9. On the Print Spooler Properties window and recovery tab, what are the default settings for the first and second failure actions?

10. Where does Dennis, the network administrator go to add Internet Printer Client to the functionality of a Windows 2003 server?

11. For planning purposes, network administrator should plan to spend _____ setting up the Print Services role on a Windows 2003 server.

12. Print servers should have _____ drivers for the same printer so that different types of clients can print.

13. Where does Tracy, the network administrator go to enable the printers to be published on a Windows 2003 server?

14. To add a second port for a network printer, what do we annotate on the Port tab of the printers Properties window?

15. What tab on the printers Properties window will allow the network administrator to set the printer's priority?

16. The server administrator wants to set up a network printer for just the accounting department. What tab on the printers Properties window will allow the server administrator to setup the printer access for just one group?

17. What group is shown on the security settings that allow all to print?

18. What is added to the Administrative Tools menu when we add the Print Services role?

19. What can a Network Administrator do at the Print Management console?

20. What is the name of the Active Directory predefined group that can manage, create, share, and delete printers in the domain?